Jayne Corey - September 08 at 08:58 AM

“ Jayne, Chris and family. I am heartbroken to read about your beautiful mother. She was the kindest, most gracious woman ever. She was soft spoken and she always had something so beautiful to say to me each time I was around her. God really did get an angel when he called her home. "Imagine" her at the feet of God. Your life has just changed again and a new journey will start. Life here on this old earth will be different, but she is only one last heartbeat away. She would want you all to continue until God says enough. All you children hold a beautiful part of her in each and everyone of you. When your tears stop, then sweet memories began. See God stores up our tears. He hears us and helps us when those tears flow. He knows the pain for each tear and helps us to heal. No words can really ease the pain from a broken heart. Our soul feels empty when our love one passes. Each day remember your mothers beautiful face and that beautiful smile. Remember the words, I love you. Her love will sustain you as Gods love does until our time to move on. What a joyous reunion that will be one day. I love you Jayne and family and my heart breaks for you all. Hold tight to Gods words. God Bless you all and again my sincerest condolences.

“ Mrs. Colbert was a true Christian lady. I grew up in the Roswell 1st Baptist with all the Colberts, but especially knowing Aleisa and John. My parents, Mary and Lewis Mason were friends of the Colberts, also. My brothers Sandy Mason was in Aleisa's class and often worked with Mr. Colbert in his teenage years. Sandy and I went to RHS with Aleisa and John.
I want the family to know my prayers go up for all of them, but I am so happy we all know she is with her Savior.

Katie Mason Cargle - August 29 at 11:26 AM

“ Thank you so much, Katie! Yes, we do know where she is, and it helps tremendously to have that 'blessed assurance!' You've been through this with your own parents, and we can celebrate them for the same reasons. Stay safe during this hurricane season!
