Those who knew Ari know that his wife and children were his whole world. He was a man of faith and loved the Lord with all his heart and always instilled faith in his children's lives. He was an example of hard work, honesty and integrity for his family. Ari was an avid reader and enjoyed learning languages, especially French. He loved hiking Georgia trails and walking his dog Coby in the neighborhood. His favorite sport was Brazilian soccer, and he loved cheering for his children in various sports events.

“ Ari was such a kind and generous guy. I always enjoyed catching up with him at team meetings and gatherings. We also shared the occasional Argentine/Brazilian food/drink favorites on my visits to Atlanta. My heart aches for Ari's family during this time as I know he will be missed more than imaginable. The Milliman team will also never be the same, missing a core piece. My prayers are with you all.

“ Ari was a bright light in our group at Milliman. His big heart showed through his unfailing kindness and genuine interest in people. He was funny and was always ready with a joke and a smile. After he, with his dog Coby, received an award in the Milliman challenge to complete a million steps, he would joke that Coby would hide when he saw the lease. He was very proud of his wife and children. He talked about moving his family from Brazil and how he missed his mother but had no regrets because it was a better life for his children. He was truly one of the finest men I've ever known.

“ I worked with Ari at Milliman... he had such a curious mind, and an obvious love of learning new things. He was always the first to try out new technologies, even on his own time! A great example for all of us who worked with him.

We talked about soccer sometimes... foolishly, I once tried to convince him of the merits of American soccer. Ari of course was having none of that. :-)

I remember fondly his big smile and hearty laugh... a good colleague, and a good man. He will be missed.

“ Ari and I worked closely together for years at Milliman on the Arius team. He was the utmost professional, always willing to go the extra mile and think outside the box. His dedication and hard work was truly admired but I will most remember him by his broad smile and big heart!! He had a wonderful spirit which I am sure will live on! My sincerest condolences to Ari's family - he will be sorely missed. - Bethany Cass
