“ Like Lamar, I am also an older student at UNG. I will remember Lamar as many things, curious, energetic and honest, but I will especially remember his kindness. I learned of my father's passing during the middle of classes last month. Lamar was the first friend I saw and he insisted on walking me to my car. Him being there calmed me, and we laughed when his hat went flying off in the wind. A sweet man.

Lamar, thank you for sharing your life with us. You will be missed by many.

“ I am currently a student at UNG that had many interactions with Mr. Lamar Mullis. His passion for the arts and film shone through by way of interest and curiosity. While many use age as an excuse to forgo expansion of new ideas and technologies, Mr. Mullis dove headfirst into the unknown. He made it known that he was a sponge, willing to soak in any and all knowledge presented to him and ready to defeat every obstacle that stood in his way. He was gentle, kind, driven and passionate. A rare combination indeed. He will be dearly missed.

“ Dear Dr. Mullis, Ms. Mullis, and all of his loved ones, please accept my condolences on behalf of the entire Communication, Media & Journalism department at the University of North Georgia. I first met Lamar when he introduced himself at our film festival last year, which he attended because he was curious about how to get involved in the film boom happening in Georgia. It took about a minute for me to feel like Lamar was an old friend. He then enrolled in classes this semester, at age 64, again because of a curiosity and a desire to try something new. I doubt I could accurately express how much I admired him for wanting to take on something so mentally and physically demanding at this stage in his life. In my eyes, Lamar was a model of a lifelong learner, and I hope we all retain his intellectual and creative restlessness. Lamar was an enormously kind, likable person. I didn't know him for very long, but in that time he became one of us and a presence I will miss in this department.

*Dear Caroline & Ms Mullis,
I know your loss will be so deep felt. Lamar & I were so very close through our Junior & Senior High years. We were like Brothers you could say. He was one of the most focused persons I ever knew. He always seemed to know what he wanted to do so much earlier than any of us. He really loved Real Estate. We shared so much of our time together with my Grandparents as we created so many good memories. This sudden loss has been hard felt across so many of our common friends. We are going to miss you my friend. Mike Wood*
