

Daniel Dudley Lovelace

August 11, 1939 - November 7, 2024

Daniel Dudley Lovelace, age 85, resident of Alpharetta, died on November 7, 2024, at Northside Hospital in Forsyth County, Georgia.

Daniel lived in multiple states throughout his childhood and graduated high school from the Park Preparatory School in Indianapolis. He joined the U.S. Army after graduation in August 1957 in a seven-month program (as a private) and continued in the U.S. Army Reserves until August 1965 where he was discharged as a corporal.

After his initial Army service, he entered Middlebury College in Vermont receiving a B.A. in History. He continued his study at Claremont Graduate School in Claremont, California where he earned a M.A. in History and a PhD in Political Science. His dissertation China and People's War in Thailand 1964-1969 was published by the University of California's Center for Chinese Studies in 1971.

From 1968 to 1974 he taught undergraduate and graduate courses in Political Science in Los Angeles and Denver. In 1970, he received a grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities to help high school teachers create a Chinese Humanities curriculum for the Denver public schools. In August 1973, he visited the People's Republic of China as a member of a delegation of teachers and educators sponsored by the U.S. Department of State. In 1974, he joined the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) Directorate of Intelligence studying Cold War political-military topics relating to China, Japan, North Korea and the Soviet Union. He also served as the CIA's Liaison Officer to the Chief of Naval Operations Staff, which was responsible for updating the U.S. Navy's Maritime Strategy.

He retired to Williamsburg, Virginia in 1998 after several years working in counter-intelligence. In retirement, he published two books: Governor, Diplomat, Soldier, Spy: The Colorful Career of Colonel Francis Lovelace of Kent, 1622-1675. and Tory Spy: A New York Frontier Family's War Against the American Revolution.

In retirement, he taught courses for the Christopher Wren Association at the College of William and Mary. In addition, he led the Friends of Greenspring Plantation, an organization focused on developing the historic home site of Governor Sir William Berkeley.

Daniel enjoyed spending his time reading, traveling, researching his family history, writing books and articles, and caring for wild birds.

A small memorial service with family members will be held in Williamsburg, Virginia in December. Those wishing to make donations to remember Daniel, should consider the National Audubon Society or Cornell Ornithology Lab at Cornell University.

Daniel is survived by his wife Joan Lovelace, son Alec, his daughter Karin, his son-in-law James Bradburn, and his two grandchildren Christopher and Matthew.
