“ Mrs. Howard (Stewart as I knew her growing up) was a incredibly sweet and wonderful lady. She was our next door neighbor, in our first house when I was very young and, I am told, I was known to sneak into her yard and pick her strawberries. She and Mr. Stewart were responsible for my Dad's love of gardening as they were the ones who first taught him how to garden. In later years, after we had moved a few streets over, I remember seeing her walking with Mrs. Payne and a few other ladies-She was obviously very smart and knew the importance of daily exercise for longevity. Whenever I ran into her later in life, I greatly enjoyed our conversations/visits and opportunities to "catch-up". She always asked about everyone in our family. She was one of the special ones.
