John was such an important part of our lives for almost 40 years that it's very hard to put it into words. He was one of the kindest and most generous people you'll ever meet. Vicki and I were always aware of his deep love for our stepbrothers David and Doug, but John also made us feel like we were his own children.

He wasn't just my stepfather, he was my friend - a friend who always looked out for me and with whom I shared an uncountable number of memories. We watched more Braves, Georgia Tech, and Falcons games and shared more inside jokes than I could ever remember. John loved to laugh and the joy I felt when he and I shared a moment of uncontrollable laughter over the levity from some silly day to day situation brings both a huge smile and streaming tears as I write this.

John was there for Vicki and me in good times and bad but, far more importantly, he took care of our mom and our mom took care of him. We were so blessed to have known him so closely and, therefore, so sad to have now lost him. We know he's in a better place, likely looking down on us with that big, contagious smile, and we know (as I just discussed with mom) that someday we'll see him again.
