“ I met Meredith when she was tangled in the throes of her late husband's Alzheimer's. We were in a caregivers' support group together. I watched her transform from a scared and embattled woman into a lady making good decisions, surrounded by family and friends, handling her challenges with grace. I applaud the sons who were so much help during what would be ultimately Meredith's last days as well as her husband's.

“ For several years Meredith and I met every Thursday morning for coffee. We had some wonderful conversations! She was witty and smart and I came to admire her and love her. I pray that you will cherish your memories of her and that God will give you comfort and peace.
