“ I only learned today of Diane's death, but wanted to extend my sympathy to the family as well as pay tribute to my cousin. As the oldest of the twelve Holley grandchildren, she definitely showed her bossy side on occasion, as has already been referenced. However, I mostly remember the fun-loving part of her personality and her fierce devotion to her family. The pictures posted brought back many good memories. I am so sorry for your loss and apologize for not responding sooner.

“ How do I pick a memory? There are so many. I guess I start from the beginning. I remember I could be playing with my army men, or my trucks; and Diane would come in and say lets play tea, so we would have tea. Or she might come in and say lets play dolls, well.....we played dolls. She always had a way of being boss. It did not matter who I was playing with, we all did what she said. I remember in the first grade, I was playing at recess and this big kid was bullying me around and he pushed me down. Out of no where Diane appeared and knocked that kid down. She told him if he ever touched me again she would tear his head off. No one ever picked on me again. We literally fought like dogs and cats til I was around 12 and we fought to a tie (she always whipped my but til then) . After that it was us against the world. When she started dating, my Mom would often send me with them. They would give me $2 or $3 and drop me at the movie and pick me up when it was over. I don't think Mom ever figured that one out. I could go on forever, like when Diane showed me where the bootleggers were, but there are just too many memories. I guess the most important thing I remember is..... she always accepted me as I was. The greatest gift of all. Thanks Sis!

“ My aunt Diane was a strong woman. She always had that little sparkle in her eye, as if up to some kind of mischief or as to say to the world..Nope..you wont run over me. I always viewed her as strong, honest and independent...blunt..spunky ! I remember she came down for Christmas..went to give paw paw (her dad) a big ole bear hug..and accidently broke a few ribs..she was much stronger than she even knew..She missed her dad SO much..it made her feel bad that she did that..but it made for a few laughs at other gatherings later..Diane loved and valued her family..Ill miss you Aunt Diane..I am blessed that I had a chance to know you and share a little life with you..I love you very much. As a young girl, I admired your strength..I still do.

To my Uncle Jerry and my cousins..I am very sorry for this loss..words cannot express the sorrow I feel. Just know, you are all in my thoughts, and in my prayers..I love you all very much.

“ I remember Diane stayed at our house and slept on the sofa bed downstairs. I had a pet white mouse which had been missing for some time and we had given him up for dead. But he reappeared that night on the pillow right in front of Diane. I don't remember her screaming but she included a scream in her retellings over the years
