“ My Daddy Died Today:

by Stephanie Lemos

Where to begin, where to end.....HMMMMMM! The end has come! My days are full of loss..hopes and wishes, that all of this is just a miserable dream and I am dreaming. That no one could feel this way, every day -- with being only half a person. But you know, we are not who we were when part of us goes away.

The longing is incredible. The tears burn your cheek and your heart is heavy and deep in sorrow. You scream but no one hears. You beg and plead and make deals with the Lord to give back what has been taken.

Nothing works to end this pain of loss and want. If only to hear his voice saying, "Hey kid, how ya' doing?" Listening to his silly stories or helping him plant a new life of greenery in his ever ending yard of growth and beauty, full of aromas of spring and color.

Catching him giving mom a kiss that we rarely see. And relish when we do. The beauty of our parents' love and closeness and laughter and silliness together is enough to make us want what they have.

You see my dad died today. And there is no turning back the clock, no dreams coming true and no more tomorrows. In an instant history is changed and our past present and future is no more.

What one saw as infallible and invincible has become penetrable like all mankind who live and die. The way I breathe, the pounding of my heart, my thoughts and feelings are not of the same as they once were when my dad was upon this Earth.

I love him so very much and miss him with all the life in me. The tears are many as the pain and sorrow of the missing never seem to stop. I see a shadow, hear a sound, in hopes of seeing him in just a slight way. None of us know the real workings of Heavenly bodies.

We pray they will show themselves to us to ease our sadness. Although all we are doing is messing with our souls, prolonging destiny. It is said, "all sorrow has an end."

We are born to die. Unfortunately, I think sorrow ends when we die. For we do not feel anymore. Therefore it lasts a lifetime, doesn't it? Remember... I remember so much.##imported-begin##James D Muir##imported-end##
